Man knows only a small part of his psyche, just as he has only a very limited knowledge of the physiology of his body. The causal factors determining his psychic existence reside largely in unconscious processes outside consciousness, and in the same way, there are final factors at work in him that otherwise originate in the unconscious. -C.G. Jung, Aion, CW 9ii, par. 253

[J]ust as the unconscious world of mythological images speaks indirectly, through the experience of external things, to the [person] who surrenders wholly to the outside world, so the real world and its demands find their way indirectly to the [person] who has surrendered wholly to the soul; for no[one] can escape both realities. If [s]he is intent only on the outer reality, [s]he must live [her/]his myth; if [s]he is turned only toward the inner reality, [s]he must dream [her/]his outer, so-called real life.

-C.G. Jung, Psychological Types, CW 6, par. 280

Projections change the world into the replica of one's unknown face. -C.G. Jung, Aion, CW 9ii, par. 17

* * *

[C]omplexes are focal or nodal points of psychic life which we would not wish to do without; indeed, they should not be missing, for otherwise psychic activity would come to a fatal standstill.

-C.G. Jung, Psychological Types, CW 6, par. 925

Nights, through dreams, tell the myths forgotten by the day.

-C.G. Jung, Memories, Dreams, Reflections

We all must do just what Christ did. We must make our experiment. We must make mistakes. We must live out our own vision of life. And there will be error. If you avoid error you do not live. ~Carl Jung, Jung, C.G. Jung Speaking, p. 98.
